

Doris (Barnd) was born in Glen Rock (York County) in 1933 and moved to Mt. Holly Springs in 1947 at the age of 14.

Doris met Max Fahnestock and the couple married in 1952, eventually adding a son and daughter to their family. Over the next 15 years between Max's military service in the Navy, college, and work career, the family found themselves living in southern United States, Pittsburgh, and York County. In 1967 the couple moved their children to Mt Holly Springs on South Baltimore Avenue, where Doris still resides today.

Doris is a member of the Methodist church on Chestnut Street, (formally EUB) which she also attended when she was a teenager. She was a Girl Scout leader for her daughter's troop, and a den mother for her son's Cub Scout troop. Through her church, Doris has volunteered in many ways, with the nursing home visitation group, quilting ministry, rummage sales, turkey dinners, and other areas she is needed.

Doris continues to be actively involved in her community. She is a member of the Friends of Amelia Givin Library, baking cookies for Foundry Day and Christmas, helping with book sales at the library by setting up books to be sold, and even working the sales desk. She has been involved in the Bicentennial Pageant and participated in the Carlisle Hospital Follies. Recently, Doris performed in the Holly Heroines Play for Mt Holly's Sesquicentennial.

Doris's most passionate mission is her quilt ministry called "Doris's Quilters for Vets" which she established in 2016 at the age of 83. She is a tough taskmaster overseeing around 15-20 quilters who make lap quilts for current and former military personnel. They have provided 1100 quilts to service members not only locally, but throughout all 50 states.
